PROFESSIONAL:

Key Occupations. Neuropsychiatrist and Dimensional Biopsychophysicist. ^

^. These are the two main groups.

Main occupational and avocational disciplines: 5 different main headers and one sub-header making 39 avocations.

Medicine (13), Physical Sciences (6), Social Sciences (8), Communications (5), Philosophy (5), (Internet. (2))

Occupations This listing is large; nevertheless, it's made applying a 3-point criterion as 'necessary criteria for inclusion': These require at least one peer-reviewed publication in the discipline, plus at least one invited lecture not in one's home institution and emphasizing that discipline, plus substantial time spent in that discipline. (In actuality this requirement of one is far less than almost every one of the 39 avocations listed below).

There is overlap and to prioritize these subspecialties, these broader areas and their subspecialties are listed in rank order of frequency of application of occupation/avocation.

To further clarify: the areas in italics involve international recognitions/ participation; and those in regular font national recognitions/ participation. Even when other comments are included for convenience, this does not exclude the requirements. Some national or international awards are listed to provide a perspective. (In two instances, the 2-point criterion is not applied: Just the publications, not the invited lectures. The word “also” is applied to differentiate. ^^)

| PUBLICATIONS OVERVIEW (peer-reviewed) |

Because of the definitions and numbers below and its continual state of flux, these figures although checked regularly, may minimally vary.

Additionally, the definition of publications becomes difficult. For example, there are hundreds of authored pages on PNI.org, Brainvoyage.com and ECAO.us, Vernon.Neppe.org (though authored by others deliberately there) and VernonNeppe.com that are not included here.

On the other hand, only a small fraction of the many Internet articles that have been peer reviewed have been included and cited only if there is no other original source. Chapters are cited from edited books authored by Dr. Neppe because they need to be mentioned.

Some papers could be under more than one header, for example, "Proceedings" were all full length papers that could be cited instead under chapters or theoretical or review articles.

As far as is known, every publication listed below has been subjected to the rigid scrutiny of appropriate peer review and peer examinations.

Moreover, because the numbers of these publications are in flux, updating of individual numbering in publications is done generally monthly.

Infrequently, the articles are in a series which means the original title covers the whole series, and for citation the individual articles are then cited.

The object below is to give a perspective as at June 2018

Authorship order: Of 796 papers and listings below approximately

- 442 sole
- 228 principal author,
- 121 second author,
- 3 third author, and
- 2 fourth author

Publication reference types: (these do not balance likely because the editor elements are not listed)

Of 796 publications subdivided approximately as follows

- 10 current books without extra editions. 22 books total including 12 new +9 further editions +1 revision (plus a 22nd with a hard copy and E-pub—not counted). Also some in press. These include either or both electronic digital versions (PDF, E-Pub, MOBI) (these total count as one)
- 2 current plays with 5= 2 plays plus 3 revisions
- Editor of 26 (depending how this is counted) journal issues of four separate journals, three listed in international indexing system (Journal Clinical Psychiatry as guest editor distributed to 39,000 individuals; 13 cited in one reference here as DIJECA unified in listing for 2012, 2013, 2014; Journal Psychology and Clinical Psychiatry listed as one reference; PJSA 1980-1986 as 11 issues).
- 2 theses
- 1 book proceedings
- 67 book chapters (includes Neppe edited books)
- 51 research articles
- 276. articles of which 221 theoretical articles and 55 review articles.
- 8 editorials / opinions
- 170 series portions
- 13 key internet perspectives.
- 7 book reviews
- 11 proceedings
- 18 prefaces/ addenda / forewords/ syllabuses/ after-words/appendices
- 23 letters to the editor
- 7 discussions
- 36 Scientific copyrighted clinical and research instruments.

- 73 abstracts

PUBLICATIONS LISTINGS

At times, a publication can fit into more than one category. Dr Neppe arbitrarily decided how to categorize them.

^ = pioneered an area, discipline or creative achievement (criterion: internationally relevant). These might be listed separately later under Research or Theoretical contributions.

 Current Major Research Areas:

Dimensional Biopsychophysics and Mathematical Theoretical Physics

1. The Triadic Dimensional Distinction Vortical Paradigm (TDVP) (also called TDDVP)

In 2011, Vernon Neppe and Dr Edward Close proposed a broad model for reality—the Triadic Dimensional Distinction Vortical Paradigm (TDVP). TDVP proposes that the finite is made up of distinct parts. These are contained within a continuous infinite reality. The finite consists of 9 spinning (vortical) dimensions, and vortical / spin movements these dimensions. Thereafter, the transfinite exists as a discrete “countable” infinity. The discrete finite is contained within a continuous infinite. This model is described in detail in the Neppe and Close book, Reality Begins with Consciousness: A Paradigm Shift that Works now its fifth edition, with 50 chapters, over 500 pages and extensively referenced (nearly 500 references) See <http://www.brainvoyage.com/RBC/perspective.php>. This has been strongly endorsed by leading scientists in various specialties (<http://www.brainvoyage.com/RBC/comments.php>). The TDVP model involves a unification of the finite and the infinite, and of Space, Time and “Consciousness” substrates (all very carefully defined) being “tethered” together. TDVP involves a metaparadigm extending across the sciences (physical, biological, consciousness, and psychological), with mathematical validations, numerous testable hypotheses

(as in the Cabibbo derivation) and a secondary philosophical model called “Unified Monism”. 24 different models of “theories of everything” including Consciousness and Dimensions were carefully objectively examined. TDVP appears to be the most promising model of all at this time, scoring a perfect score (39/39) whereas all others besides the original Neppe and Close models in the 20s, scored <20/39.

2. 9-dimensional finite spin reality

Edward R. Close, and Vernon M. Neppe, derived the Cabibbo angle from a 9 Dimensional Finite Spin Reality. This profoundly important finding affects the basic assumptions of physics and changes the way scientists understand life and the Universe, suggesting our current concept of reality is incomplete. “Drs Close and Neppe have demonstrated that we live in a 9-dimensional finite reality, not just our traditional three dimensions of space happening in a present moment of time. Though we experience physical living in our restricted 4-dimensional finite reality, the rest of our reality appears to be hidden beyond our direct view. Yet these additional dimensions might provide many keys to life as we know it, and explain many of the mysteries of science.”

 Selected Major Research in Previously Unexplored Areas:

( = published or / and scientific conference presentation;  = awaiting publication -in press; * = submitted)

1. Carbamazepine:

1. Carbamazepine usage in the refractory psychiatric inpatient with electro-encephalographic temporal lobe abnormality (1983 B). This is the only double-blind randomized crossover drug trial of carbamazepine versus placebo as adjunctive treatment in the predominately chronic schizophrenic population. Cited by Chairman Prof. Emrich of Germany at an international conference on the area in Switzerland in 1989 as one of the two major pioneering contributions in the field of anticonvulsants in Psychiatry (other = Okuma in Japan). This research pioneered an area associated now with estimated 100000s of prescriptions (N=13) **.

Theoretical offshoots relate to the role of the kindling phenomenon in psychopathology **.

Appropriate application of anti-kindling agents in psychopharmacology **.

Later related research:

2. Carbamazepine in the atypical psychotic with target features. This retrospective case study tested the hypothesis that CBZ responsiveness can be predicted by target features. This was demonstrated in all nine cases  (N=9). This paper applies a broader theoretical principle of my book, Innovative Psychopharmacotherapy,  namely the concept of target features in management. Additionally, certain principles in that book are elucidated by this research, namely the concepts of psychopharmacological responsiveness and toleration as epiphenomena of underlying biochemical abnormalities **

3. Carbamazepine in benzodiazepine withdrawal

a. his research ongoing since the mid 1980s has substantial promise as a major breakthrough in allowing patients to be taken off benzodiazepines  (N=9)

b. including the psychogeriatric patient  (N=5); and

c. the population complicated by opioid abuse.  (N=2)

2. The Temporal Lobe and Anomalous Experience:

1. Temporal lobe symptomatology and anomalous subjective experience Masters dissertation (178 & XV pages). This controlled investigation demonstrates that so-called "psychic" symptoms relate to anomalous temporal lobe functioning, and that "psychics" experience specific temporal lobe symptoms. Supervisor: Professor Lewis A. Hurst (N=12) **

Later related research:

2. A study of Déjà vu experience. Doctoral thesis in four volumes (589 & XL pages). Promoter:

Professor Lewis A. Hurst. This study shows there are at least four specific subtypes of Déjà vu corresponding to diagnostic categories and that such phenomenological experiences may be used in diagnosis and management (N=89) . Déjà vu as a screening instrument for psychosis has possible valuable applications. **

3. The phenomenology of the olfactory hallucination and its relationship to temporal lobe pathology. Showed the olfactory hallucination to have several phenomenologic types differing amongst nosologic groups. (N=10) **

4. SPE and cultural psychosis. A cluster of patients with definite and different diagnostic criteria are described  (N=3).

This entity is now discussed under Cultural Psychoses in the Comprehensive Textbook of Psychiatry. **

5. The incidence of anomalous experiences Demonstrated the frequency of subjective paranormal experiences in ostensibly normal people with diverse backgrounds -a. first in elderly women knowledgeable about the area  (N= 84), then

Later research:

6. replicated in naive young subjects.  (N=30)

7. Near-death experiences and memory. An evaluation of the quality of NDE of subjects shortly after their NDE compared with a period of time later to test the hypothesis that the NDE may be a retrospective falsification. (N=20) **

3. Azapirones – New Uses:

1. Azapirones in hostility. The value of buspirone being evaluated clinically in irritability and impulsivity in adults. (N>50; P? 0. 001) **

2. Azapirones in manic irritability. Buspirone appears a promising drug in the management of manic irritability. (N=12) **.

3. High dose buspirone in tardive dyskinesia.

a. This is the first use of buspirone to apparently effectively alleviate tardive dyskinesia . The hypothesis is that tardive dyskinesia management is modulated via the serotonin 1A neurotransmitter system interacting with the supersensitive dopaminergic receptor. Neuroleptic free patients with demonstrated tardive dyskinesia are being monitored and treated with high doses of buspirone. Several centers are involved under my supervision. (N> 20 successful cases)

Later research:

b. Replicated these results at Washington University (p <0. 001) using patients generally on adjunct neuroleptics . (with Lori Moss, Wayne Drevets)

Theoretical concepts: dopamine partial agonism at high doses. Related studies:

4. Buspirone in Huntington's chorea: Case report

5. Concomitant buspirone for fluoxetine akathisia. The addition of buspirone appears a promising technique for decreasing the agitation / restlessness/ akathisia experienced by a subgroup of patients on fluoxetine. (N=13) (described 1989)
6. Buspirone adjunct for SSRI refractoriness: Ongoing study. Described originally 1989. Principle has been used extensively by colleagues.

Related: the normalizing effect of buspirone in SSRI related sexual dysfunction.
Theoretical concepts: the possible interaction of the metabolite of buspirone, 1PP, being relevant in psychosexual dysfunction

7. Buspirone in attention deficit disorder. This involves first research in collaboration with Zo Young in Reno, Nevada (N>50 ADD) **
Related studies: Buspirone in anger, impulsivity and temper tantrums in Non ADHD children and > 50 non-ADD children and adolescents with aggression) **
8. Buspirone use in children. This is the first safety study of buspirone in >100 numbers of children and adolescents.
9. Buspirone dosage as a function of non-vertiginous dizziness: Ongoing study.
Theoretical concepts: non-vertiginous dizziness as an indicator to lower dosage
10. Buspirone in the suicidal patient.
Ongoing study.
11. Buspirone combination with beta-blockers in anxiety. Ongoing study.

4. Measures of higher brain function:

1. Screening Cerebral Assessment of Neppe (BROCAS SCAN). The major current project. This involves the development of an entirely new screening instrument in neuropsychiatry to evaluate cerebral cortical functioning. It involves detailed instructions, but can be administered clinically by medically trained individuals. Results are analyzed according to functional impairment i. e. recall, recognition, orientation, organization, concentration, calculation, apraxia agnosia, speech and neurological functions and compared with behavioral elements. A validity scale exists.
2. Preliminary results suggest this has utility and high face and construct validity, excellent reliability, easy use, sensitivity and specificity as a half-hour screening instrument.  (N= 45)
3. Moreover, differences have been demonstrated between psychogeriatrics with mood disorder, multifocal disease and Alzheimer's. The BROCAS SCAN is significantly better than the Folstein MMSE. (N=50 to 45).comparisons of response are being related to a Revised Brief Psychiatric Rating Scale.

4. Analysis of specific item and category correlations analyzing internal reliability and validity.

5. Catatonia

The use of levodopa in catatonic stupor. Using the model of dopamine antagonism being implicated in catatonic stupor, and related to catalepsy and responsive to dopamine agonists, levodopa -carbidopa combination reversed all six subjects.  (N=6)

6. Psychotherapy

The Undiluted Message. Demonstrated the value of delivering an undiluted psychotherapeutic message during medical rounding  (N=20)

7. Transcultural Psychiatry:

A study of Black persons admitted to a South African mental hospital. This is the only comprehensive epidemiological/psychiatric study of a Black population group in an African mental hospital. (N=300)

Later research:

Cannabis psychosis -a valid entity? This study (N=100)  demonstrated the existence of an entity of "dagga" toxic psychosis which had heterogeneous elements predominantly reflecting mania or schizophrenia. Dagga is an extremely potent form of tetra-hydro-cannabinol **.

Attempts to correlate phenomenological, historical, clinical, neuroradiologic, electroencephalographic, neuropsychological, diagnostic and therapeutic data (N=35). A multiaxial conceptualization of "epileptic psychosis" and epilepsy with psychopathology is integrated into this involving a new suggested classification the Tiered Axes for Psychopathology and Epilepsy (TIER).

EVALUATION SCREENS AND INSTRUMENTS

Author of 35 major clinical practice neuropsychiatric assessment instruments or clinical historical screens.

Numbers 1 to 11 are used regularly as required at the PNI.

Numbers 12 to 15 are used for research.

Numbers 16 to 21 have been eclipsed by later Neppe instruments.

Numbers 22 to 21 are specialized research instruments.

Numbers 22 to 25 though derivations are major research projects and clinical instruments.

Numbers 26 to 35 are minor modifications of current instruments so that the data is easily comparable. Usually this involves differences in scoring e. g. shifting from nominal to ordinal scoring; different time limits e. g. including lifetime, last three months, last months, recreational drug use scoring, other responses, adding in questions, modifying wording, modifying formatting. These make the instruments more data and patient friendly.
